In betting terms, clean sheets — one or both sides not conceding any goals — are significant in a number of markets, which we will explain in a little more detail here.

If you bet on both teams to score, your bet only wins if neither side keeps a clean sheet.

Very similar to both teams to score, you can back both sides scoring, just one or both of them or none, with the latter two options being reliant on one or two clean sheets being kept, respectively.

Technically any number of goals could be scored with a clean sheet in soccer occurring when all the goals go to one team.

What Is a Clean Sheet in Football, Baseball, and Ice Hockey? — clean sheet represents that one team did not score a goal against the other team.

As such they offer bets on clean sheet in soccer.
